The bankrupt railroad line and its equipment was offered by Auctioneer A. V. Shea at the south door of the City Hall, and the bid of Mr. Williams was the only one that was received. In the absence of a higher bidder, his offer was accepted. The sale was witnessed by prominent officials of the Virginia Railway and Power Company and the Virginia Trust Company, the receivers.

BANKRUPT LINE-HAS NEVER PAID OPERATING EXPENSES

Besides seven and one-half miles of track, the property sold yesterday includes the Marshall Street Viaduct, the Spring Street railway viaduct, a power-house in Fulton, machine shops, office house in Fulton, machine equipment, rolling stock and sundry parcels of undeveloped real estate. The road, it is understood, has never paid operating expenses, and $700,000, at a forced sale, was generally regarded as a good price.

In its petition to the Council for a new blanket franchise, the Virginia Railway and Power Company gives assessive surance that it is in a position to offer the city the franchise rights of the Richmond and Henrico Railway Company, and includes in the list of concessions which it offers as a consideration of the Marshall Street Viduet as a city thoroughfare, subject to the company's rights to operate its cars in over it.

The suggested ordinance, filed with the Committee on Streets in blank proposes a trackage scheme, in accordance with which the lines of the two ance with which the entry of the company of the two ance with which the lines of the two ance with which the entered the control of the lines of the two ance with which the entered the control of the straddle interest for the price in Liverpool reported that it do not.

No marked changes in the battle line in France and Belgium are indicated by the latest official reports. The Germans claim progress at several points in the extreme west, notably near Vpres, where they are trying to break through to reach Calais.
